Rain brings added weight and fears of roof collapse

MEMA. A state agency warned people to safely clear off snow as rain moved into the area.

As if Bay Staters haven't had enough to deal with this winter, state officials are warning people about the danger of roof collapses.

Rain was expected to begin falling overnight Thursday and throughout much of the day Friday, according to the National Weather Service. Up to a quarter-inch of rain was expected to fall. State officials said the rain would increase the weight of the snow that has piled up on countless rooftops around the state.

"With the addition of rain in the immediate forecast, dry, fluffy snow piled on roofs can act as a sponge, absorbing any additional sleet and rain, adding weight and stress to structures if not cleared," said Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency Director Kurt Schwartz.

The most recent collapse occurred Thursday on the South Shore. Just before 2 p.m., Weymouth police and fire personnel were called to a home where a car port had collapsed. A 29-year-old woman was struck by the falling structure. She was taken to a hospital where she later died, officials said. Authorities were investigating the cause of the collapse.

On Wednesday, two cows died and eight more were injured when a Framingham barn collapsed apparently after the roof caved in under the weight of the snow.

So far this winter, Boston has recorded 56 inches of snow, which is about 25 inches above normal, according to the National Weather Service.

The state emergency agency said commercial buildings and other structures with flat or slightly pitched roofs are most susceptible to collapse. Residents and business owners are urged to remove snow from roofs if it can be done safely from the ground with a snow rake.

Also, be on the alert for accumulating snow buildup or snowdrifts on roofs, particularly roofs that are flat or only have a slight pitch, as on garages, car ports or porches. And the agency said to clear ice dams and storm drains to let water escape.

Inequality. Gap between Boston's rich and poor among nation's highest

Boston's income gap is among the largest in the country, according to an analysis by a private research group.

The richest 5 percent of Boston households earned at least 15 times that of households in the 20th percentile of income, according to the Brookings Institution report released on Thursday. The report used U.S. Census data from 2012.

"The latest U.S. Census Bureau data confirm that, overall, big cities remain more unequal places by income than the rest of the country," the report said.

"Large populations, diverse housing types and generally progressive politics mean that most cities will always have higher shares of the rich and poor than smaller places. But the contemporary causes and consequences of inequality in cities vary greatly across the national map."

The report said that income inequality may be the result of global economic forces, but that it matters in a local sense.

"A city where the rich are very rich, and the poor very poor, is likely to face many difficulties," the report said.

The richest 5 percent of Boston households earned $223,838 in 2012; the poorest 20 percent of households earned $14,604 in the same year.

Scholarship funding

Harvard gifted $150 million

A Harvard University alumnus is providing the esteemed institute with the largest financial donation in the school's history: $150 million.

Kenneth Griffin, CEO of Citadel and a 1989 graduate, made the large donation to help fund the school's financial aid program, the Harvard Gazette reported.

Not only will the gift bring 200 Griffin scholarship recipients to Harvard, but it will also provide matching funds for 600 scholarships through the new Griffin Leadership Challenge Fund for Financial Aid, which is meant to inspire other alumni and friends to contribute to the program. METRO

Homicide

DA: Peabody man murdered girlfriend, 23

A Peabody man turned himself over to police after he allegedly murdered his 23-year-old girlfriend.

Franklin Castano, 43, was charged with murder, the Essex district attorney's office said Thursday. He is expected to be arraigned Friday.

Castano was arrested after he appeared at the Lynn Police station and apparently informed authorities of the killing, initiating a murder investigation in Peabody.

Authorities released no other information and said they are investigating. METRO

Patrick unveils reforms for criminal justice system

See more at www.metro.us

Compassion. Gov. Deval Patrick is calling for more humane treatment of inmates.

A new series of criminal justice initiatives aims to cut in half the state's recidivism rate in the next five years by better preparing inmates to re-enter society while also taking steps to improve treatment conditions for people suffering from mental illness and substance abuse.

"Treating those with substance abuse as prisoners is wrong. We must make the beds available for these individuals to receive proper treatment in proper settings," Gov. Deval Patrick said Thursday at a UMass Boston discussion about the state's criminal justice system.

Patrick outlined a plan that includes improving the inmate classification system, limiting the use of restraints on mentally ill patients and banning the shackling of pregnant women while in labor.

Law enforcement also will be trained on how to properly handle people with mental illness and 64 detoxification beds will be added to the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services Metrowest region, which is the only region without a detox program.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Eased restraints

Patrick said restraints on inmates will be limited:

- "Unless it can be said with certainty that the inmate poses a serious and immediate physical danger to himself or his fellow inmates, he should not be tied down limb-by-limb in the 21st century here in Massachusetts. While on the subject of the use of restraints, let me be clear that we will also end — finally, completely and immediately — the use of restraints on pregnant inmates in labor. Current regulations prohibit this in state prisons, and today the Department of Corrections will issue emergency regulations extending that probation to all facilities, including houses of correction."

Ukraine truce is shattered

Kiev. The head of the city's administration quit the ruling party in protest.

Ukraine suffered its bloodiest day since Soviet times on Thursday with a gun battle in central Kiev as President Viktor Yanukovich faced conflicting pressures from visiting European Union ministers and his Russian paymasters.

Three hours of fierce fighting in Independence Square, which was recaptured by anti-government protesters, left the bodies of more than 20 civilians strewn on the ground, a few hundred meters from where the president met the EU delegation.

Riot police were captured on video shooting from a rooftop at demonstrators in the plaza, known as the Maidan or "Euro-Maidan." Protesters hurled petrol bombs and paving stones to drive the security forces off a corner of the square the police had captured in battles that began two days earlier.

Kiev's city health department said 75 people had been killed since Tuesday, which meant at least 47 died in Thursday's clashes.

The foreign ministers of Germany, France and Poland met for four hours with Yanukovich and extended their stay to put a road map for a political solution to opposition leaders. Diplomatic sources familiar with the discussions said it involved a temporary government until new elections. REUTERS

Russia calls sanctions 'blackmail'

Russia sharply criticized Western sanctions against Ukrainian officials on Thursday, after the United States imposed visa bans and the European Union considered similar measures in the face of deadly clashes in Kiev.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Alexander Lukashevich said the sanctions were "absolutely illegitimate" and "capable of only aggravating the confrontation" in Ukraine.

Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov likened threats of sanctions to blackmail, state-run news agency RIA reported.

"The EU is also trying to consider the introduction of sanctions and at the same time they come to Kiev on uninvited missions," Lavrov was quoted as saying. REUTERS

Accused

Judge tells Colo. theater gunman to undergo new exam

The man charged with mass murder for a 2012 shooting rampage that killed 12 people in a Colorado movie theater must submit to a second pretrial sanity examination because the first was incomplete and inadequate, a judge has ruled.

The second court-ordered exam will focus on James Holmes' state of mind at the time of the killings, not on his competency to stand trial, and on whether any mental illness precludes him from facing the death penalty if convicted.

Holmes, 26, had been slated to go on trial this month. But the judge ruled in November that the trial be postponed indefinitely to deal with requests by prosecutors for further mental evaluations of the defendant.

Holmes underwent an extensive psychological examination at a state mental hospital last year after pleading not guilty by reason of insanity.

This means prosecutors have the burden of showing he knew right from wrong at the time of the shooting.

Defense attorneys have acknowledged in previous court filings that Holmes committed the shooting frenzy but say he was in the midst of a "psychotic episode" at the time. REUTERS

OBAMACARE: FEELING BETTER

Amid the Ukrainian turmoil, the Olympic headlines and Ted Nugent's apparent breakdown from what I can only assume is cat scratch fever, you may have missed a small item in the news: Obamacare is doing better.

Back before the holidays, you could hardly hear yourself think in D.C. amid all the cursing Democrats and chuckling Republicans. The Affordable Care website was still seemingly held together with paper clips and string. Stories were erupting about insurance companies dropping customers like stones in the sea, while the White House frantically argued Barack Obama never precisely said, "If you like your health care plan, you'll be able to keep your health care plan." (For the record, he said those exact words at a town hall meeting in Wisconsin, and similar phrases many other times.) And everyone was watching the number of Obamacare enrollees lag far behind projections.

Quoted

The program is decidedly better off than it was when winter began.

For a while, it looked like the administration's poor handling of the program might accomplish what legions of angry opponents could not, reducing it to bureaucratic shambles unable to support its own weight.

Now, however, sign-ups are surging with 3.3 million on board at the end of January. Are they on track to hit 7 million by the end of March as hoped? No. Vice President Joe Biden admitted as much this week when he said that 5 or 6 million enrollees would be "a hell of a start." (And for the record, what matters more is who signs up; about 40 percent need to be generally healthy to make the math work.) That said, the program is decidedly better off than it was when winter began.

Mind you, issues — some potentially serious — remain. The numbers still suggest if Obamacare were an addition to your house, it would be the kind of project that came in late, cost more than estimated and did not turn out like you expected. But like that questionable addition, as each month goes by, it looks like America is learning to live with Obamacare — even if it is not what the contractor promised.

Up in smoke. E-cig industry on tenterhooks ahead of US regulation

E-cigarettes are battery-powered cartridges filled with nicotine liquid that, when heated, creates an inhalable vapor. / GETTY IMAGES

Lobbyists for electronic cigarette companies have been beating a path to the White House, hoping to prevent the administration from imposing strict rules on the burgeoning $2 billion industry.

In November and December, more than 35 organizations, including e-cigarette companies, cigar and tobacco makers, physician groups and health advocates, trooped through the doors of the White House's Office of Management and Budget.

OMB has been reviewing a rule proposed by the Food and Drug Administration that would bring e-cigarettes under its jurisdiction and could potentially require companies to register and pay fees, list the ingredients in their products, obtain prior approval for new products and restrict online sales and marketing to children. World powers and Iran make 'good start' in Vienna

Six world powers and Iran made a "good start" in talks in Vienna toward reaching a final settlement in the decade-old stand-off over Tehran's nuclear program, but conceded their plan to get a deal in the coming months was very ambitious.

By late July, Western governments hope to hammer out an accord that would lay to rest their suspicions that Iran is seeking the capability to make a nuclear bomb, while Tehran wants a lifting of economic sanctions.

Wide differences remain on how this could be achieved, although the two sides said they agreed during meetings this week on what to discuss and a preliminary timetable for the talks on such an accord.

"We have had three very productive days during which we have identified all of the issues we need to address in reaching a comprehensive and final agreement," said European Union foreign policy chief Catherine Ashton. REUTERS

Protecting 'Portlandia'

See more at www.metro.us

Put a bird on it. Carrie Brownstein and Fred Armisen talk about the secret ingredients of their IFC show.

"PORTLANDIA" PREMIERES THURSDAY, FEB. 27 AT 10 P.M. ON IFC.

Over the past three seasons of "Portlandia," Fred Armisen, Carrie Brownstein and director Jonathan Krisel have perfected a revolutionary recipe that marries music and comedy with utter absurdity. The fourth season, which premieres Feb. 27, furthers their cause, especially with a sketch called "The Celery Incident," which went live online earlier this week.

In the sketch, Steve Buscemi plays a sales representative for celery, desperately trying to compete against other vegetable salesmen who have had recent fantastical, unlikely success with veggies like kale and Brussels sprouts.

"I think 'Celery' embodies — even though it's more genre-specific than some of our other sketches — I think it really embodies the traits of the show that I think are the most successful," says Brownstein, "which is taking a relatable, sometimes timely premise and veering into the absurd, and then hopefully veering even more into surreality, and then somewhere at the heart of this, having some relatable characters that are suffering through genuine and authentic relationship issues."

Just because they use familiar ingredients for their recipe doesn't mean the show is formulaic. Yes, you will see a lot of the characters you've seen in the previous three seasons, but in preposterous situations: Candace and Toni, the owners of Women and Women First bookstore, host a car wash fundraiser; Lance and Nina — Brownstein and Armisen's gender-swapping couple — find themselves in conflict with Jeff Goldblum's mattress salesman over a certain claim he has made that casts everything Lance stands for into doubt.

"We'll have pictures of the characters on a bulletin board and we'll have an idea for something," says Armisen, "and then we kind of shift the idea to each character, like, 'I wonder if they would be good for this?' And then eventually it will just resonate right away, and you'll know it's perfect for a set of characters."

'Specific and strange and hyper-real'

Mess with "Portlandia" and you may end up on the wrong end of a rake. / IFC

"'Portlandia.' That's what I do'

With such a winning formula, it's understandable that the "Portlandia" peeps would be protective of what they've created.

"We have worked for four seasons to make this world that feels a little bit specific and strange and hyper-real," says Brownstein. "So we try and keep that world magic and special, but of course in the meantime we have had people from 'SNL' and friends on. There's definitely an open-door policy, as long as it feels germane and doesn't feel conspicuous to have things cross over."

We'd be remiss not asking Armisen if there would be crossover with his new role as bandleader for "Late Night with Seth Meyers," which also premieres next week (Feb. 24 on NBC), but he suddenly turns even more protective.

"I don't want to talk about it," he says, shifting the conversation into uncomfortable territory. "That's something for my friend Seth and it's fun and I don't want to talk about it because this is about 'Portlandia' and Carrie is on the other line."

He will allow, however, that he'll be able to take time off to work on "Portlandia."

"It will be perfect," he says, with a little less attitude. "My focus is 'Portlandia.' That's what I do."

Two hours to snooze

Kevin Costner tries to return to the good old days in "3 Days to Kill." / JULIAN TORRES

Action dramedy. Kevin Costner's comeback machine sputters with the listless "3 Days to Kill."

The hard truth about Kevin Costner's career is that he's an excellent supporting player and romantic comedy actor who thinks he's a serious dramatic lead. He can be a very good serious actor, if one prone to hubristic mega-failures. But he's better when he's having fun, as in "Silverado," "Bull Durham" or in his recent spate of playing second fiddle in "The Upside of Anger" and "Jack Ryan."

On paper, "3 Days to Kill" sounds like the ideal comeback-to-the-lead project. (He hasn't headlined a film since 2008's "Swing Vote.") He plays Ethan Renner, an aging secret service agent. It features two things Costner can do well: action and comedy. It's co-written by Luc Besson, the Eurotrash auteur who, with "Taken," turned Liam Neeson into an AARP-aged badass. And it begins promisingly: Ethan wipes out a hotel suite of baddies.

But it turns out that cough is worse than it seems: Ethan is dying. Told to settle his affairs, he returns to his Paris home to reconnect with his daughter, Zoey (Hailee Steinfeld). She's an angry teen, rightfully peeved at a workaholic dad who's been MIA most of her life.

How do you treat that with comedy (or action)? You don't — at least, "3 Days to Kill" never finds a way. Both illness and family affairs serve to bog down what seemed to be a peppy, fogey fighting romp. Costner isn't having fun, spending the entire film speaking in a gruff grizzle that makes him sound like Christian Bale's Batman.

The only thing that distinguishes "3 Days to Kill" is its unthinking lack of good taste. Besson is an unapologetic vulgarian whose, shall we say, Frenchness doesn't always translate. (See: the many weird things in "The Fifth Element.") No one thought to edit out the script's old-school "Brokeback Mountain" jokes or creepy acts like Ethan spying on Zoey's Facebook.

Then again, the director is McG, whose last film, the action rom-com "This Means War," had government agents using NSA techniques to spy on a girl they both liked. His and Besson's lack of self-awareness might be the film's most interesting trait.

1 Possible 'Fantastic Four' casting announced

MILES TELLER

MICHAEL B. JORDAN

KATE MARA

JAMIE BELL

According to multiple reports, actors Miles Teller, Michael B. Jordan, Kate Mara and Jamie Bell are in final negotiations to star in "Fantastic Four," which is scheduled for release on June 19, 2015.

Teller, who would play Mister Fantastic, and Jordan, who is confirmed to play the Human Torch, have worked together in the recent past: They co-starred in the bro-com "That Awkward Moment."

Kit Harington and Richard Madden, who star in the HBO series "Game of Thrones," also reportedly auditioned for the part of Mister Fantastic.

Kate Mara, from Netflix series "House of Cards," is up for the part of Invisible Girl. Jamie Bell would portray Ben Grimm, aka The Thing.

The film is said to be based on "The Ultimate Fantastic Four" comics, in which the characters are younger than they were in the original series, which was the basis for the prior two "Fantastic Four" movies. ROBERT CRISCOLA

2 Ludacris blames Paul Walker for financial woes

Ludacris is saying he can't afford his child support bills because Paul Walker died.

In court on Wednesday, the actor/rapper (who is famous and not just some ordinary guy) said he can't pony up $15,000 a month in child support for his 2-month-old daughter because he was waiting for the paycheck from "Fast and Furious 7," which, of course, is on hold because of Paul Walker's tragic death in November.

According to TMZ, Ludacris is saying he only made $55,000 last year and can only afford to give his daughter $1,800 a month.

The judge is reviewing Ludacris' financials (because, come on, no way did he only bring in $55,000 last year) and in the meantime is making him pay $7,000 a month.

The Arby's hat returns

Pharrell Williams can't quit this ridiculous hat. The topper, which launched a thousand memes when he first sported it during the Grammy Awards, was on Williams' head yet again during rehearsals for the Brit Awards 2014 at the O2 Arena on Wednesday night in London. Is he just hiding a throbbing cartoon-size lump incurred from some enormous cartoon hammer?

Trainspotting: Berlin via the Orange Line

Boston music institution Rick Berlin has waited tables at Doyle's Cafe — halfway between the Forest Hills and Stony Brook stations — for almost three decades, but he's only witnessed a fraction of the establishment's history. During its 100-plus years, Doyle's played a crucial role in introducing Sam Adams beer to the masses, and has provided adult beverages to many a political who's who. Today, its blue-collar sensibility helps keep Jamaica Plain from getting too conceited.

If they opened an evil corporate Doyle's across the street and offered you more money, would you do it?
I don't think I could survive. I was fired after two hours at Davio's. I washed dishes at a South End restaurant, but I couldn't wait tables there.

Back in September, they scheduled Boston Calling for the same weekend as the Jamaica Plain Music Festival. As a JP Fest committee member, were you pissed?
And it's always going to be the first weekend after Labor Day! But who wants to stand on cement and pay $50? It's free to go to this f—ing thing of ours.

Rick Berlin is in his element at Doyle's. / BARRY THOMPSON

If JP had to have a mascot ...
It has one: the albino squirrel. There are albino squirrels near the dock at Jamaica Pond. [The squirrel is] peculiar, and so is JP. ... That's a filthy little creature. It's like a rat with white fur, man. It's f—ing awesome!

Long-term data tell different story on climate change

Re: 'Cool down, global warmers' (Metro, Feb. 19) Letter writer Kevin Finnigan is right, last year was no warmer than any other year — as long as you don't count 129 out of the 133 years we have on record (according to the NOAA). 2013 was warmer than all of those; the fourth warmest, in fact. His claim that temperatures haven't risen in the last 17 years is an example of cherry-picking. Add another 17 years to that timescale and you get a different picture. Ninety-seven percent of scientists support the view that climate change is occurring and human activity is a huge contributor to it. The other 3 percent carry water for the fossil fuel industry.

Argument against plastic is paper-thin

Re: 'Cities, towns move forward with bans on plastic bags' (Metro, Feb. 19) Plastic bags shouldn't be banned. You will have the same problem with paper bags, too, and they break easily and fall apart in the snow and rain. I've seen several paper bags lying around the city of Cambridge, so it's not just plastic, it's paper bags as well. Paper bags are bigger and tear quicker than plastic, not to mention cost more for retailers. And you think plastic is bad — just you wait. Ha.

PITCHING DEPTH CAN BE PUT ON HOLD

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN.

Chicks dig the long ball, and that's a fantastic reason to load up on hitters early in your draft. But it's not the only one.

Optimal fantasy baseball draft strategy has long stated that we value the bats early, attack pitching later and save closers for last. Why? Read on:

Everyday consistency

Pitchers affect your fantasy stats once every five days and hitters affect them every single day. It's a simple concept, but one that is lost on far too many owners. On top of that, the year-to-year consistency of hitters is far greater.

Even elite pitchers like Tim Lincecum and Justin Verlander succumb to arm troubles and dips in velocity often, while the best hitters are a near lock to bat within a range of their career averages.

Outside of Clayton Kershaw, there's not a single pitcher I'd target in the first four rounds.

Who to attack

OK, so we're going to wait until the middle rounds to compile our pitching staff. That strategy only works if we hit on the right guys. We're looking for talented arms on good teams (wins is a stat dictated by outside factors) that ideally throw in pitcher-friendly parks. Give me a few pitchers from the Jordan Zimmermann, Gerrit Cole, Masahiro Tanaka, Michael Wacha and Shelby Miller tier and I'll be thrilled.

Streaming

Inevitably, there are going to be some atrocious offenses in baseball this season. The Astros, Marlins and Cubs immediately come to mind. The advantage of having droppable pitchers on our roster is that we can simply "stream" in No. 4 or No. 5 starters against these lowly teams. It's an especially effective strategy in head-to-head formats, where we can dominate the wins and strikeout categories on a weekly basis while also having a good shot at ERA and WHIP — despite not using high picks on a pitcher.

You want Michael Wacha on your team, not elite pitchers and top picks like Justin Verlander, who will cost you in the hitting categories. / GETTY IMAGES

Thankfully, we don't have a Jahvid Best situation on our hands with Jordan Reed. The Redskins' tight end has a history of concussions, but is feeling better after one ended his rookie year.

NBA pickups

Time to scour the waiver wire for these players:

- Patty Mills, G, Spurs — With Tony Parker shut down, the sharpshooting Mills will get 26 to 30 minutes nightly.
- Ben McLemore, SG, Kings — Sacramento traded away Marcus Thornton, paving the way for their rookie.

Conservative Celtics

Ainge folds 'em at trade deadline

There was great buzz regarding the Celtics in the early hours of the NBA trade deadline Thursday. If you're a fan of chaos relating to Boston basketball, the day was a dud.

The Celtics were one of the favorites across the league to make a swap, with players like Brandon Bass, Jeff Green and Kris Humphries seemingly ready to be shipped out to help out a contender. But Boston's president of basketball operations Danny Ainge stood pat and the 19-36 C's will head to Los Angeles to take on the Lakers Friday (10:30 p.m., CSNNE) with the same team that was intact in Wednesday night's loss to Phoenix.

The Celtics currently own the seventh worst record in the league, but are also just six games behind Charlotte for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The Bobcats seemingly improved on deadline day, acquiring guard Gary Neal from the Milwaukee Bucks.

NBA. Pacers land biggest name on deadline day, acquiring Philly's Turner

The Pacers are in this thing for real now. Indiana was already seen as a threat to knock off the Heat in the Eastern Conference this spring but Pacers executive Larry Bird is now betting that former Sixers swingman Evan Turner can put Indy over the top.

Indiana traded oft-injured forward Danny Granger to the 76ers Thursday in exchange for Turner and center Lavoy Allen. Turner is averaging a career-high 17.4 points per game this season. METRO

Ravens' Rice accused of hitting fiancee

Baltimore Ravens running back Ray Rice was seen on surveillance video at Revel Casino in Atlantic City, N.J., dragging his fiancée, Janay Palmer, out of an elevator. Police said Palmer became unconscious after Rice struck her.

Rice's lawyer Michael Diamondstein said that it was Rice in the video but that what was shown is "not the complete event, but is merely the end result of what transpired." METRO

NFL. Patriots officially hire Lombardi, but title is not in the 'front office'

The Patriots officially added former Browns general manager Michael Lombardi to the organization Thursday, giving him the title of "assistant to the coaching staff."

Lombardi was fired from his Cleveland post on Feb. 11 and reports in the days that followed had him heading to Foxboro in some capacity.

"Mike's got a lot of experience," Patriots head coach Bill Belichick said Thursday at the NFL Combine in Indianapolis. "He's done a lot of things in his career in the NFL. I'm sure he'll be doing many of those things for us. We'll see how it goes."

Belichick and Lombardi previously worked together when Belichick was head coach of the Browns in the early 1990s.

Lombardi has worked in the front offices of several NFL teams over the years including the Eagles and Raiders.

The Patriots lost several coaches this offseason as Pepper Johnson went to Buffalo and Dante Scarnecchia retired.

Sox bring in lefty hurler Capuano

The Red Sox have agreed to terms with left-handed pitcher Chris Capuano, according to multiple reports. Capuano is likely to fill the void left behind by Ryan Dempster, who will not pitch in 2014. Dempster served as a fifth starter for much of the 2013 season. The 35-year-old Capuano went 4-7 with a 4.26 ERA last season with the Dodgers.
